Korean Barbecue Beef

Kiwi-tenderized bulgogi-style beef with dipping sauce · From Epicurious (Marinade 1)

Illustration

Serves 3 to 4

BEEF & MARINADE

- 2 1/2 pounds rib eye beef, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 2 teaspoons sesame oil
- 2 teaspoons crushed garlic
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon rice wine (sake)
- Pinch of black pepper
- 1/2 piece of fresh kiwi, juiced in a blender

DIPPING SAUCE

- 1 tablespoon soybean paste
- 2 teaspoons crushed garlic
- 2 teaspoons red pepper sauce
- 1 teaspoon salad oil
- 2 tablespoons water

STEPS

1. Trim the fat off the beef with a knife. Distribute the sugar evenly on the beef by sprinkling it on each piece. Allow beef to sit for 10 minutes.
2. In a separate bowl, mix together the soy sauce, sesame oil, garlic, sugar, sake, and black pepper. Put aside.
3. Massage the beef with the kiwi juice using your hands; the kiwi works as a tenderizer. Add the soy sauce mixture and mix. Marinate for 10 minutes; because the beef is thin, it doesn't need long.
4. Barbecue it: ideal if grilled over smoked wood, but just as good in a frying pan or skillet. Cook until browned, being careful not to overcook.
5. Last, to prepare dipping sauce, combine all sauce ingredients and cook over low heat for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve on the side.

Source didn't list prep or cook times.

Heart-healthy tip: Use sirloin or flank in place of rib eye for a leaner version. Serving it in lettuce wraps instead of over a big bowl of rice also lightens it up.